Dear Chris:

I wanted to thank you for all of your help, and the assistance offered by the Anti-Defamation League, to the United States' recent diplomatic mission to the meeting regarding racism, xenophobia, and anti-semitism on the Internet organized by the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. Without ADL's participation, I doubt that we could have so forcefully and effectively presented the United States' position on this important issue.

I particularly appreciated your lending us Brian Marcus, as a public member of the delegation. Brian's technical expertise – and the fact that he monitors such Internet content professionally – made him truly invaluable. And, your own comments, while not formally part of the United States delegation, were a healthy contribution to the trans-Atlantic debate.

I also appreciated the candid discussion we were able to have on issues of mutual concern, and I look forward to deepening an already excellent working relationship between the ADL and the Civil Rights Division.

With warmest wishes,

R. Alexander Acosta,
Assistant Attorney General
