

Opportunities for Regional Engagement on Voting Rights

If you would like to mobilize supporters in your region to engage on voting rights during the upcoming election, here are three easy ways to do so!

Volunteer as a poll worker on election day.

- Many poll workers are unable to volunteer this year due to the pandemic, which has resulted in a drastic reduction in polling places and long lines to vote, particularly in minority communities.
- Volunteering to work the polls on election day is the most straightforward way to lower barriers to voting in your community.
- Applications for election work can be submitted at the Work Elections website – a project of the Fair Elections Center.

Create a voting plan and encourage others to create their own.

- Research shows encouraging voters to make a plan for how and when to cast their ballot is one of the most reliable ways to increase turnout.
- Participants would create their own plan detailing how they will vote (in-person or by mail), when (on Election Day or before), and where (if in person, where is the polling place and how will they physically get there)
- They should be encouraged to share their plan either via social media or email with friends, family and colleagues, and urge them to do the same.
 - We will help craft language for those social media posts and emails.
- Should also include a link to Vote.org where individuals can find pertinent information to help make a voting plan.

Volunteer as a poll monitor on election day.

- Work to ensure everyone is granted free and fair access to the polls on election day by monitoring irregularities and providing support.
- Could either involve being physically present at polling sites or helping to staff a hotline for support.
- Dedicated track for legal professionals to provide support unique to their skill set.
- Election Protection is a leader and established ADL partner. Their site makes it easy to sign up.

All images courtesy of freepikcompany

If your region wants to participate, let the Voting Rights team at CSC know what option(s) you're interested in and we will work with you to craft your message and regionalize it as best as possible.